JORDAN'S WACHOVIA CUP

We were not looking for reward; we simply wanted to do our best, and we did try. The people of Wachovia Bank recognized and awarded our efforts. The Wachovia Cup brought us acclaim as the first 3-A school to be honored for outstanding athletic accomplishments. A symbol of past achievements, the Cup encourages us to constantly challenge ourselves. Jordan High School offers us the chance to excel in many ways. We must continue to greet each scholastic, social, or athletic opportunity with that same enthusiasm for total commitment.

"Homecoming on September 19? But that's too early!" We longed for the crisp, cool fall weather typical of football games, but our disappointment quickly faded as we prepared for the traditional celebrations. A Night in New York was the theme for the week with dress up days such as Bum Day in Central Park and daily courtyard contests which fired our excitement. Friday night brought Jordan's first football win of the season with a 3-0 score. The Homecoming Court was presented during halftime, amid whispers of speculation as to who had been chosen queen and king. With the crowning of Janice Dampier and Scott Pearce, the second half of the game began. The antics of the preceding week, the expectation of meeting old alumni, and the presentation of the Court prepared us for the final thrill of a successful football game.

To: The Class of 1981
The Jordan High School motto speaks to the chance that each student has to prepare for the future. I hope that when you look back on your years at Jordan, you will be satisfied with the manner in which you responded to the challenge. Certainly the opportunities went beyond academic development. There were chances to grow through athletic competition, the arts, social activities, and vocational exploration. No student is able to fully participate in everything that our school has to offer, but I sincerely hope that you sought and found your special place.

So much for the chances that were available to you, the student. For those of us who have worked with you as teachers, counselors, and administrators, we also had a chance. That was a chance to influence your lives. If our influence was positive, then we have made a small contribution toward a better world.

Good luck to each of you in the years to come.
I hope that you will find happiness and success.

A Chance to . . .

It sometimes seemed the more knowledge we acquired the more we realized how little we knew. The possibilities provided at school were endless and mastering any area seemed all but impossible. We knew, however, that the independence for which we longed, as well as the ability to reason intelligently, rested upon our educations.

Would we have gained the knowledge to analyze problems facing us? The Iranian Hostage Crisis, Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, and the seemingly unceasing arms race led us to question the issues of World Peace. Every action in a corrective direction seemed countered by overwhelming obstructions. Technology allowed man to engineer mammoth buildings, but the fatal MGM hotel fire and similar tragedies proved him still unable to insure safety in the structures.

While scientists sought solutions for man's fallibility, we were repeatedly reminded that our sophisticated technology could not master nature. We sat helplessly as Mount St. Helens erupted time and again. We knew that the responsibility of developing defenses against natural disasters and debilitating diseases would soon be ours. Looking to present leadership, our officials demonstrated our confusion. Carter, Reagan and Anderson battled for the presidency, engaging in "mud slinging" and debates. Reagan's landslide victory brought Republican dominance to the executive and legislative branches for the first time in a quarter of a century. As America looked to this new administration with hope, North Carolinians remained loyal to the Democratic Party, looking with expectation to the unprecedented re-election of Governor Jim Hunt. Pope John Paul II brought a similar international hope to many in his travels throughout the world. The new year promised a beginning in many ways, heightened by the long awaited release of our hostages held captive for 444 days. Our leaders had employed diplomacy and compromise in releasing international tension.

We, too, must actively strive to continue improvement in our world. What we learned now would provide a basis for our future decisions. We trusted our teachers to guide us in developing our skills and strengthening our powers of deduction. They challenged us to reach beyond that which we thought we could do, and aided us in discovering knowledge and understanding.

To Mrs. Kimberly Alston,

Even though I am not in your class,
I wish you the very best of luck in the future.
May all of the desires in life come true in your favor, may all the dreams you have come true to

Administration: Worth the Hassle

Crowded halls on the first day of school had students seeking the calm of the office. Calm, however, was not to be found, and speaking to Mr. Sills, Mr. Rayford or Mr. Bartholomay was almost impossible. The administrators were overwhelmed by immediate demands for schedule changes, parking spaces, and just about anything else imaginable. When asked why the job was worth the pressure, Mr. Bartholomay replied, "It's worth it when you come to school and see the Wachovia Cup, and the State Beautification Award. I guess it's helping the kids reach their full potential".

Principal: James Sills. Ass't Principals: Edward Rayford, Henry Bartholomay. Bookkeeper: Doris Broderson. Secretary: Lib Barbour.

Mentors Have Superhuman Patience

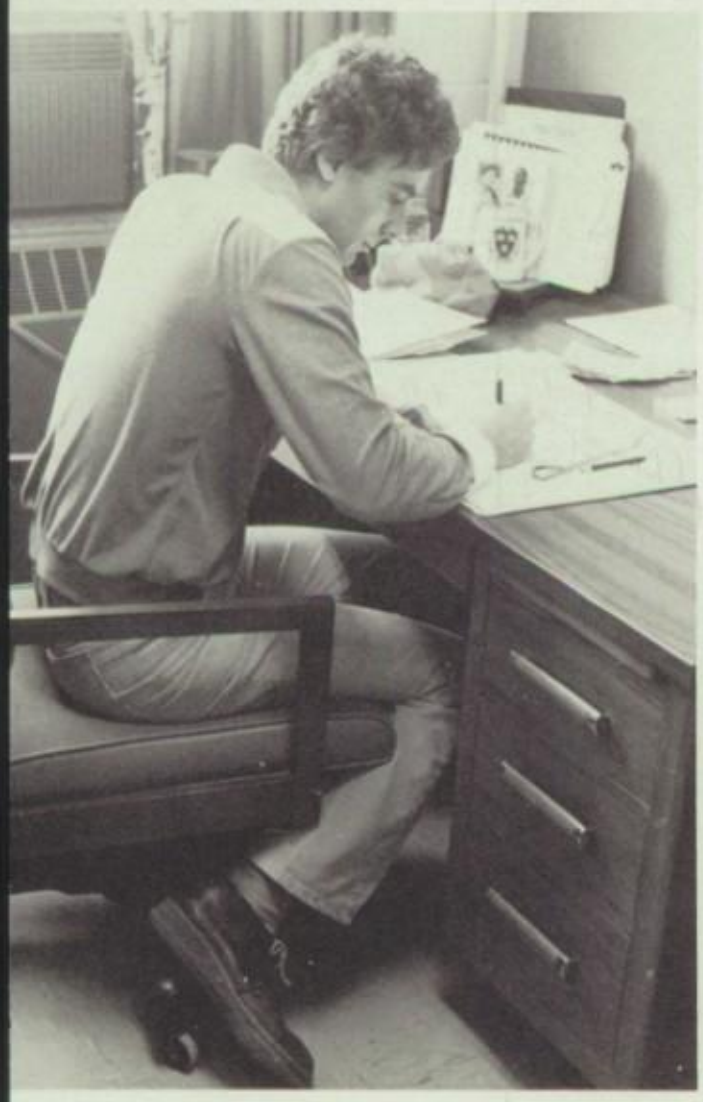
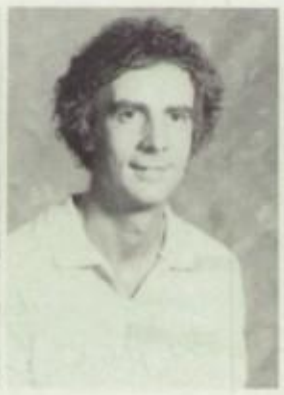
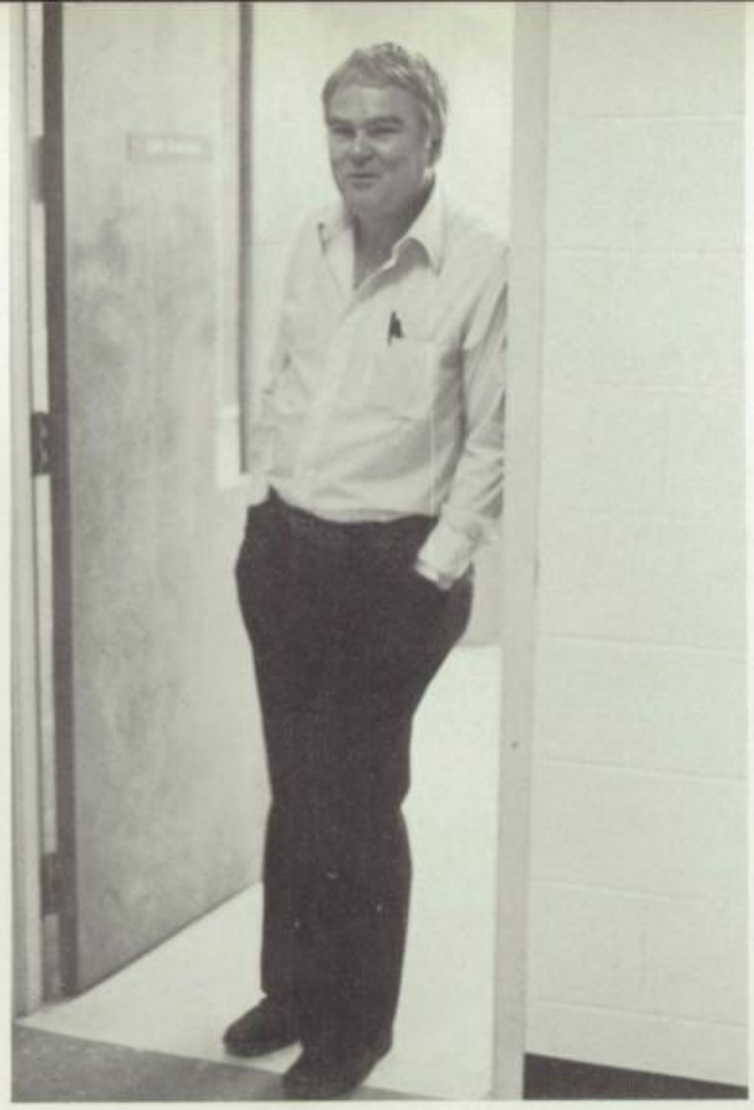
Walking into the counselor's office, a student found the desk covered with appointments, messages, transcripts and recommendations. He entered a bit hesitantly for he realized he was one more problem to add to the counselor's concerns. But there it was — a welcoming, cheerful smile! From where did the endless patience come, the readiness to help others with their problems at any time?





Secretary: Louise Scott. Counselors: Roger Messier, Nezzie Carter-Moore, Charlotte Wilkinson. Registrar: Charles Baker.



Drafting: Arthur McKneely.
Carpentry: Milton Wethington.
Business Education: Connie Good,
Fran Ferrell.

Vocational Class Constructs House

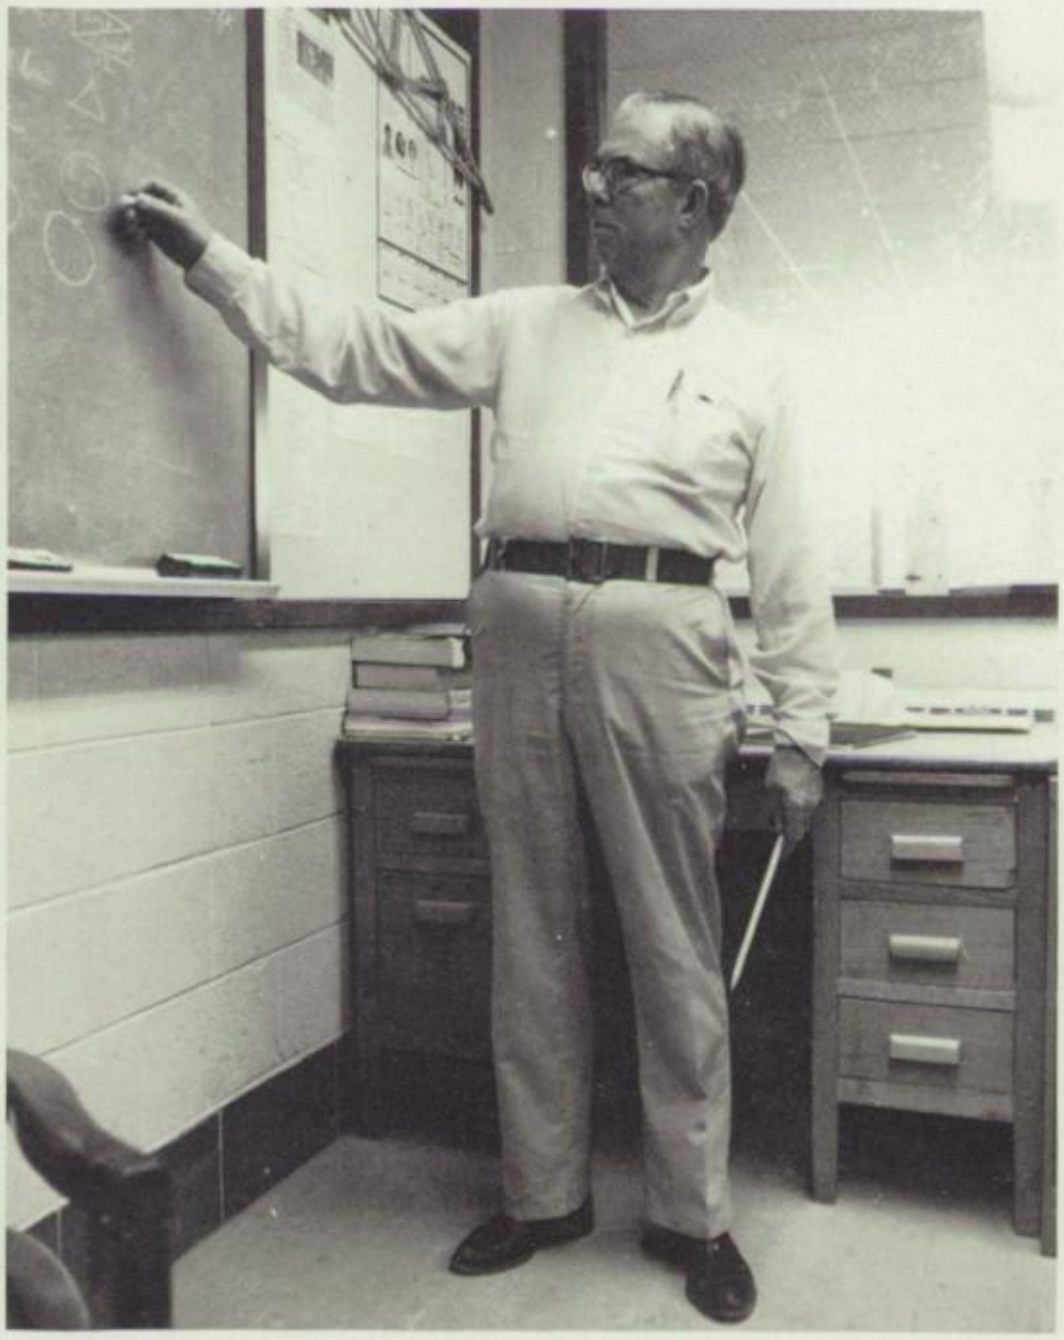
Nails, hammers, saws and insulation kept the hardware stores in business and the carpentry class busy. They were building a life-sized house, contracted and planned for use on the North Carolina Coast. Day after day work continued, under the instruction of Mr. Wethington, as the class realized the amount of labor involved in construction.



Business Education: Paulette Gillis.
Home Economics: Sandra Morris.
Distributive Education: Cathy Toohill, Debbie Patterson.

Preparing for the Future

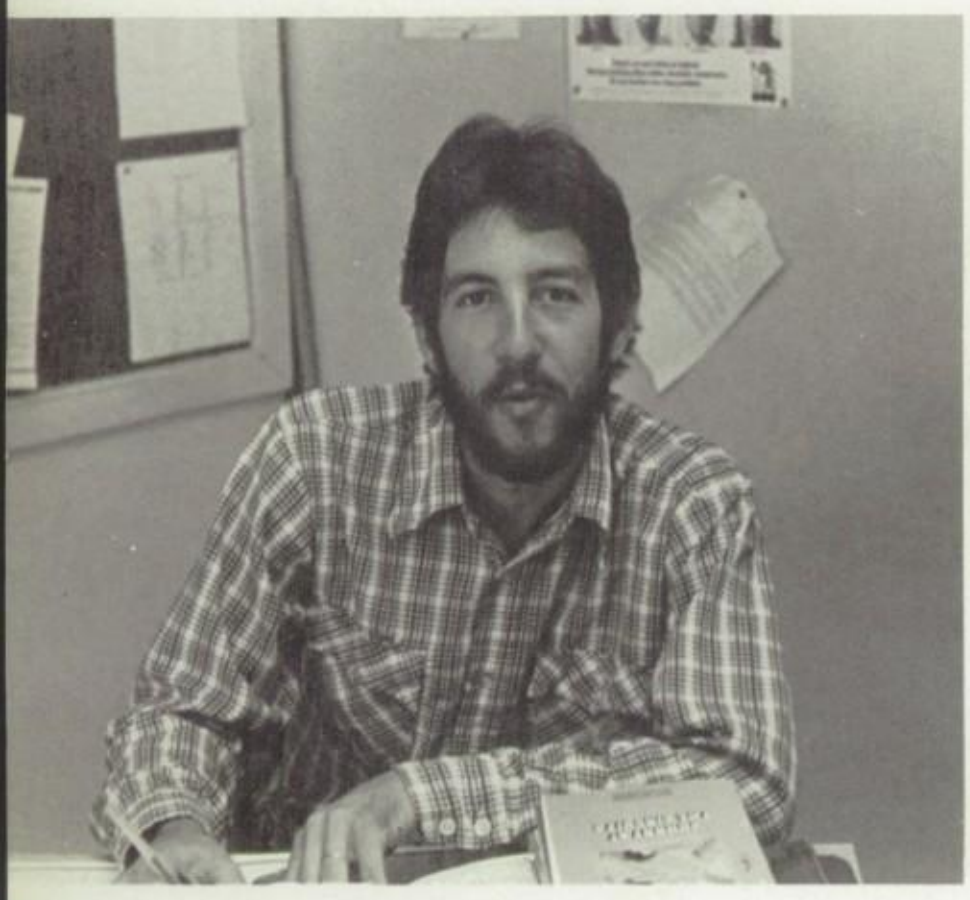
The "real world" of nine to five work would soon greet many who studied under the guidance of auxiliary teachers. Courses in school were geared towards practical application in business. Extra training in Math, English and Social Studies strengthened skills for future jobs.



Learning Consultants: Linda Margolis, Peter Hoyt. Competency Test Consultants: Jan Phillips, Ruth Cushman.

Athletic Department Motivates Minds

It was not simply a matter of teaching or perfecting skills. Coaches provided that little extra push, the psychological motivation that separates a good team from an average team. Athletes relied on their coaches for encouragement as they displayed confidence in their teams' abilities. While many Jordan coaches received Conference Coach of the Year honors, the athletes knew that no award could recognize the entire scope of their coaches' contributions.

Physical Education: Ann Harris, John Popson, Gail Acomb, William Keith.

Music and Art in Harmony

Classes in art, chorus and instrumental music were not considered work, rather a welcomed change from the pressures of daily studies. These electives provided a creative outlet for the tensions brought on by the academic grind. As young artists, singers and musicians practiced, they began to realize the potential which lay deep within them.

Art: Lyda Teer, Donna Ross. Music: Lisa McIver, Jesse Holton, Les Hicken.

Increasing Jordan's Continental Connection

The aroma of "la nourriture" spreading throughout the hall proved more inviting than the prospects of daily classes. A Spanish ballet, a French repast and a Roman banquet increased awareness of cultural differences in the world. Teachers provided such opportunities, extending learning beyond the grammatical rules and literature of another language by incorporating customs of other countries.

French: Portia Wilson-Whitaker, Mary LeMay. Spanish: Joyce Mitchell, Mary Hunt. Latin: Susan Spurrier.

Foreshadowing Insight

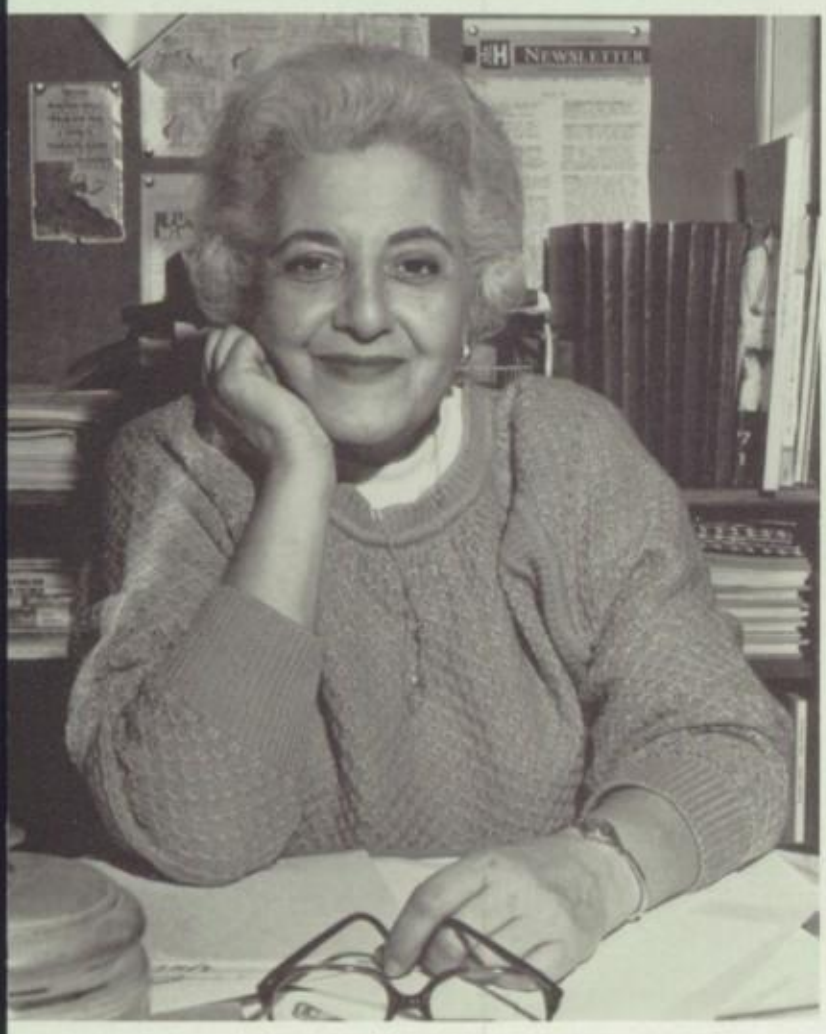
English: Tom Culbreth, Elnora Shields, Pat Penny, Faye Lloyd, Ann Berces.

English. The word itself conjured up vague facts and assignments of critical essays. Ethan Frome, The Scarlet Letter, Lord of the Flies — reading lists went on and on. Although usually confusing, occasionally the underlying meaning of a novel, poem or short story was discovered. When literature took on this personal significance, the English class had fulfilled its purpose: the communication of a thought.



English: Jane Shoaf, Rachel Simon, Shirley Strobel, Curtis Young, Barbara Melosh.

Library Expansion Opens Doors

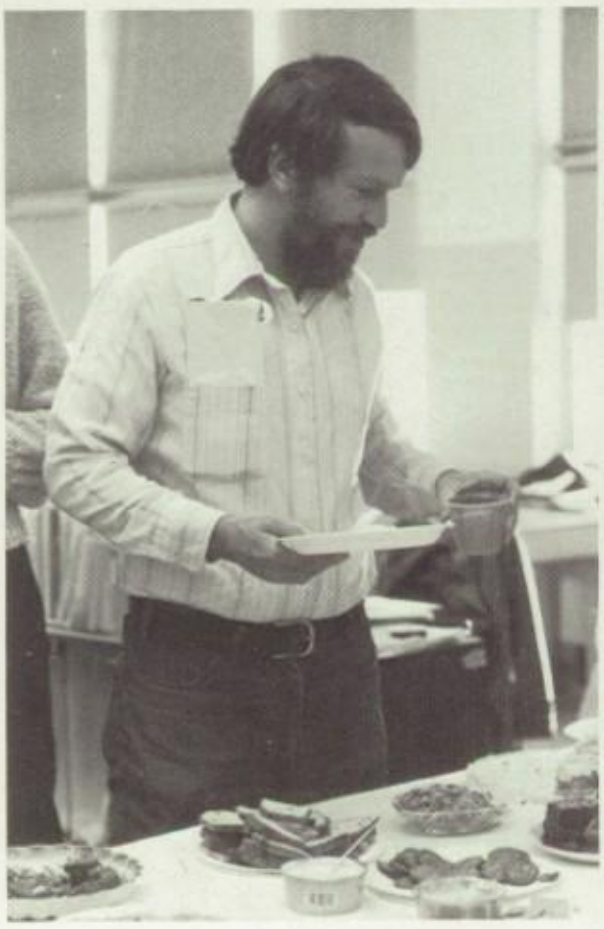
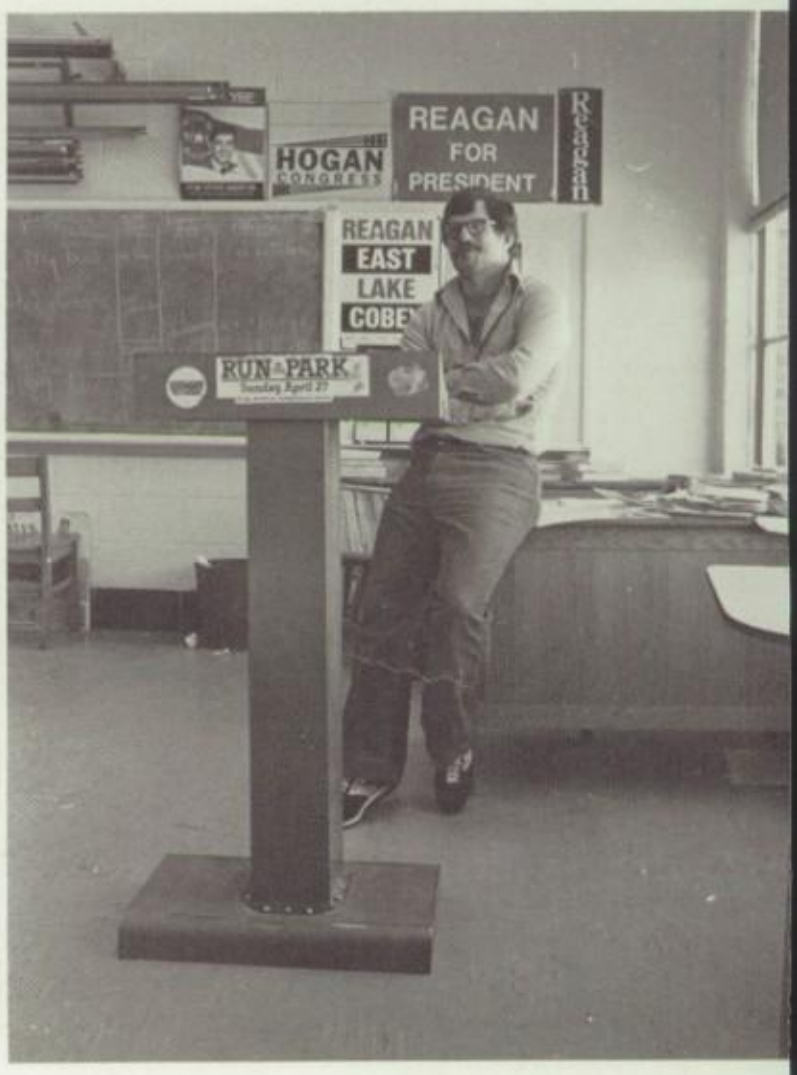
Enveloped in clouds of dust, students cautiously approached the source of commotion — the library. Curiously peering through the door, they saw boxes, books, wood and an abundance of dust. The renovation and enlargement allowed room for additional books and more space for comfort. Tearing down doors to expand dimensions helped to further broaden horizons for Jordan.





Psychology: Henry Hall. Library: Nancy Henderson-James, Tami Allen. History: Grover Jones, Richard Hill.

Looking Into the Past

History teachers frequently stated that well-known phrase, "the past always repeats itself." It seemed a cliche, yet historical blunders showed the reality of the thought. Studying previous strategies, students developed possible methods of resolving present dilemmas.

History: Emily Warner, Carol Kenzer, Patricia Brodie, John Gray.

Calculating the Prospects

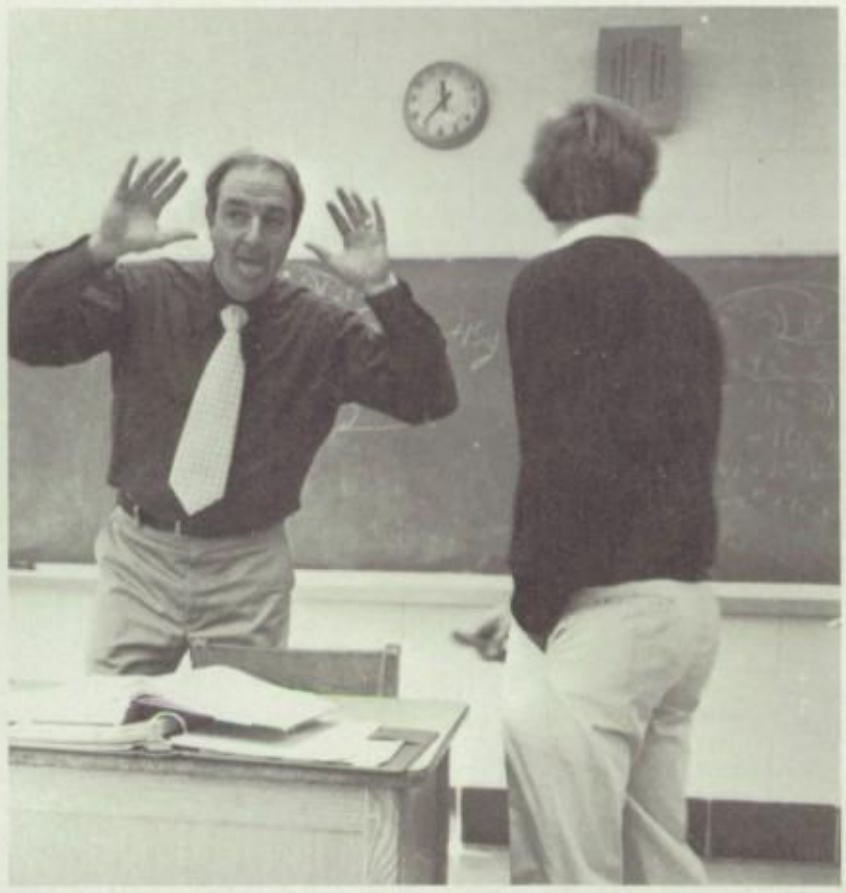
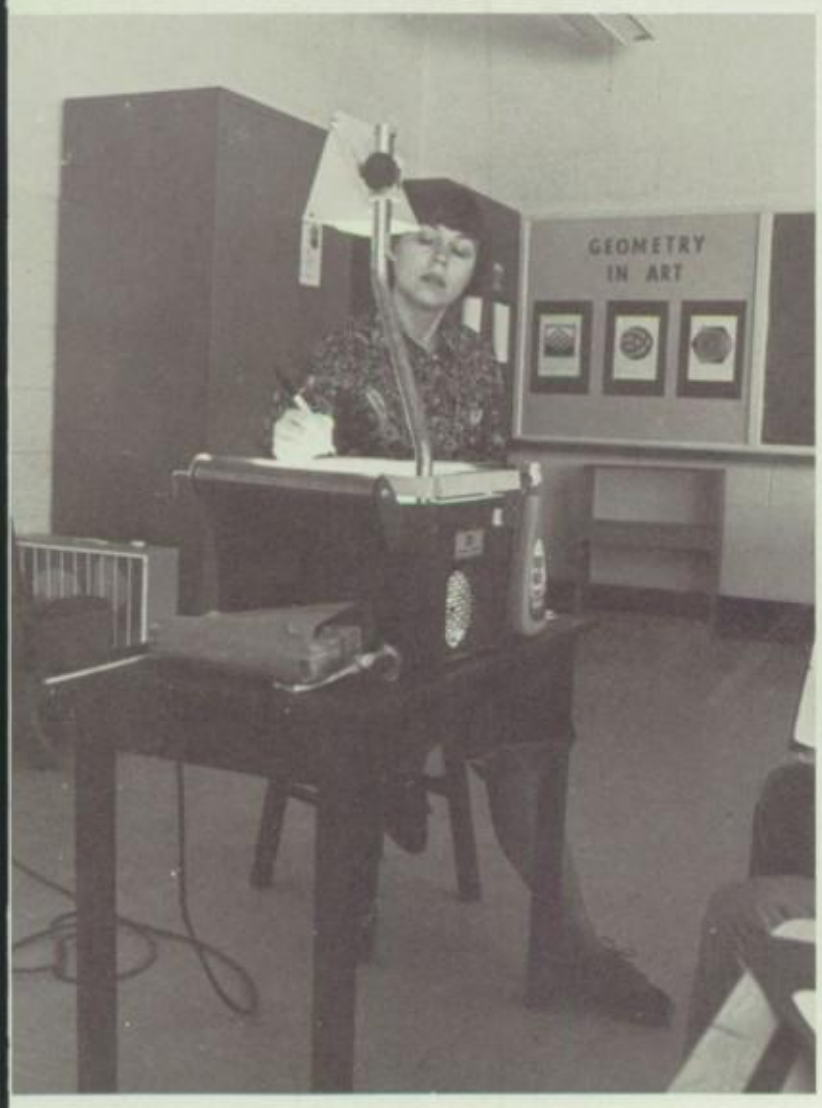
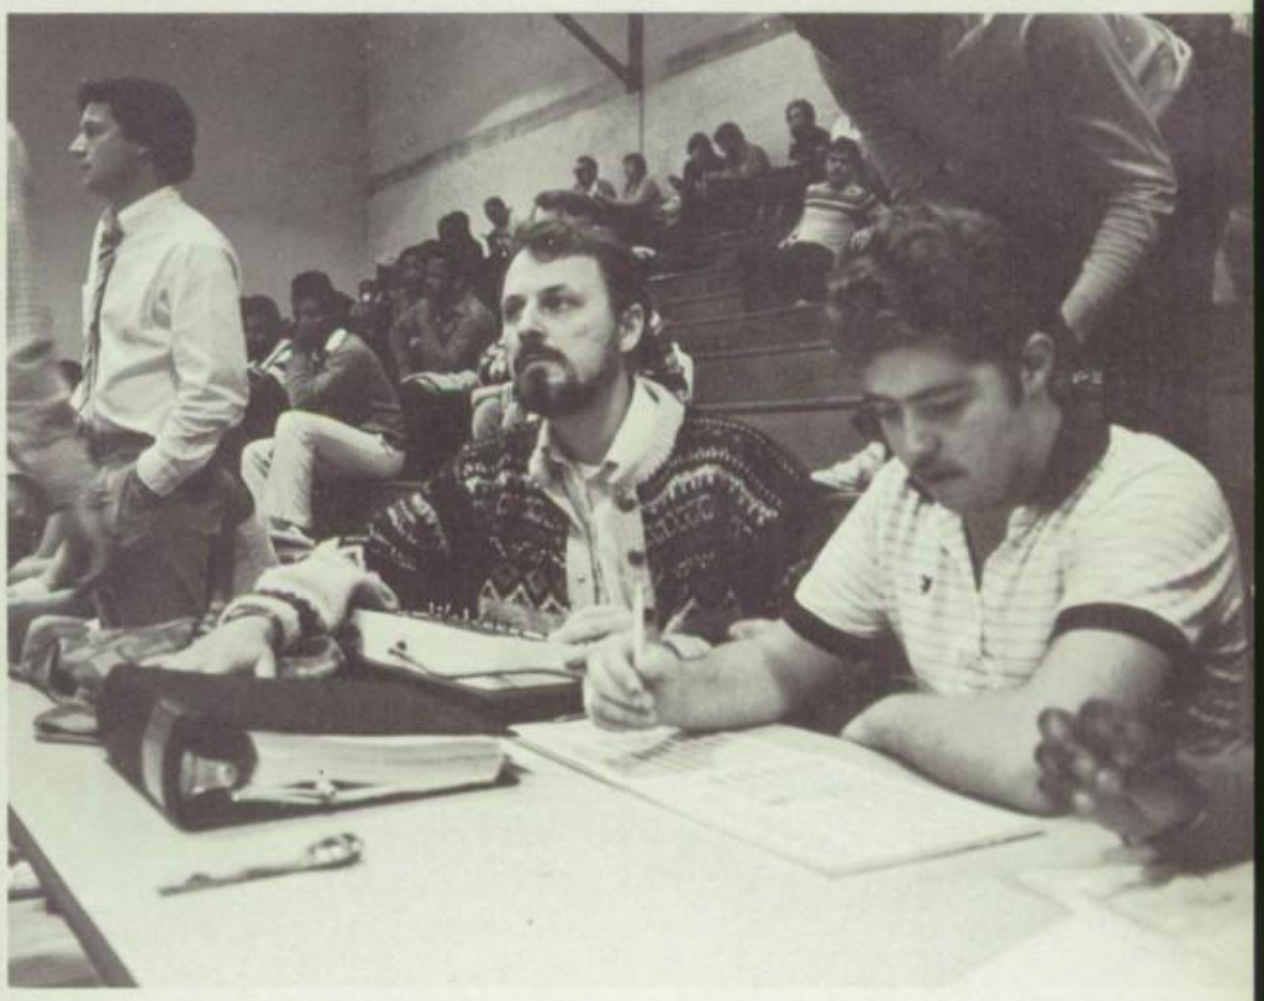
Given: The student learns the axioms which graph his path through life. Step by step he measures the dimensions of his progress, calculating the sum of his efforts. The importance of his knowledge is not evidenced immediately, yet the theory eventually reveals itself. Proven: Mathematics are an integral addition to our lives.

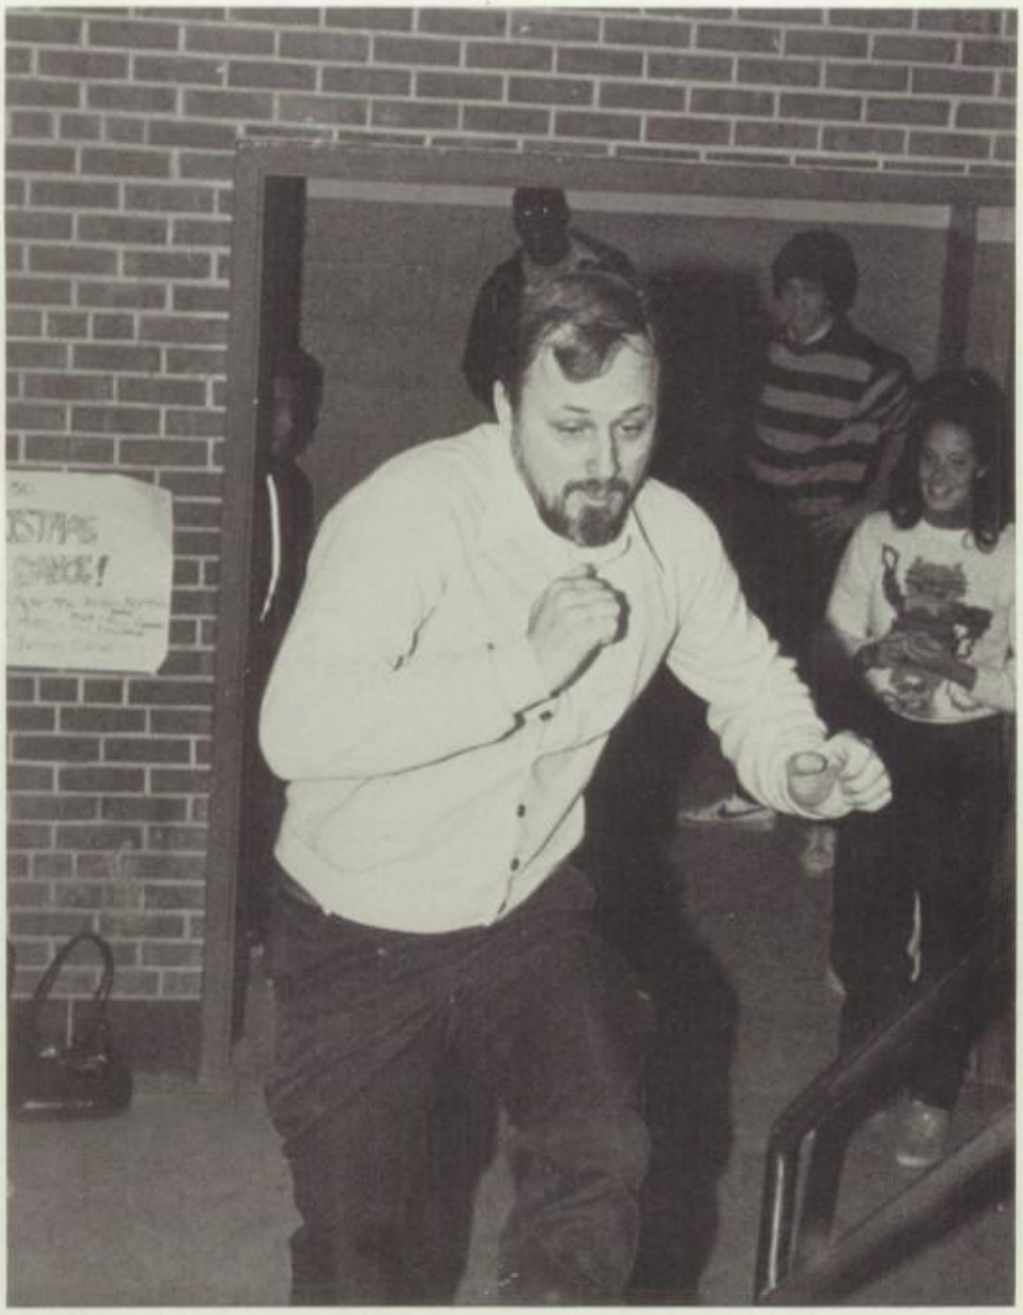
Mathematics: Patricia Robbins, Robin Ray, John Avery, David Green.

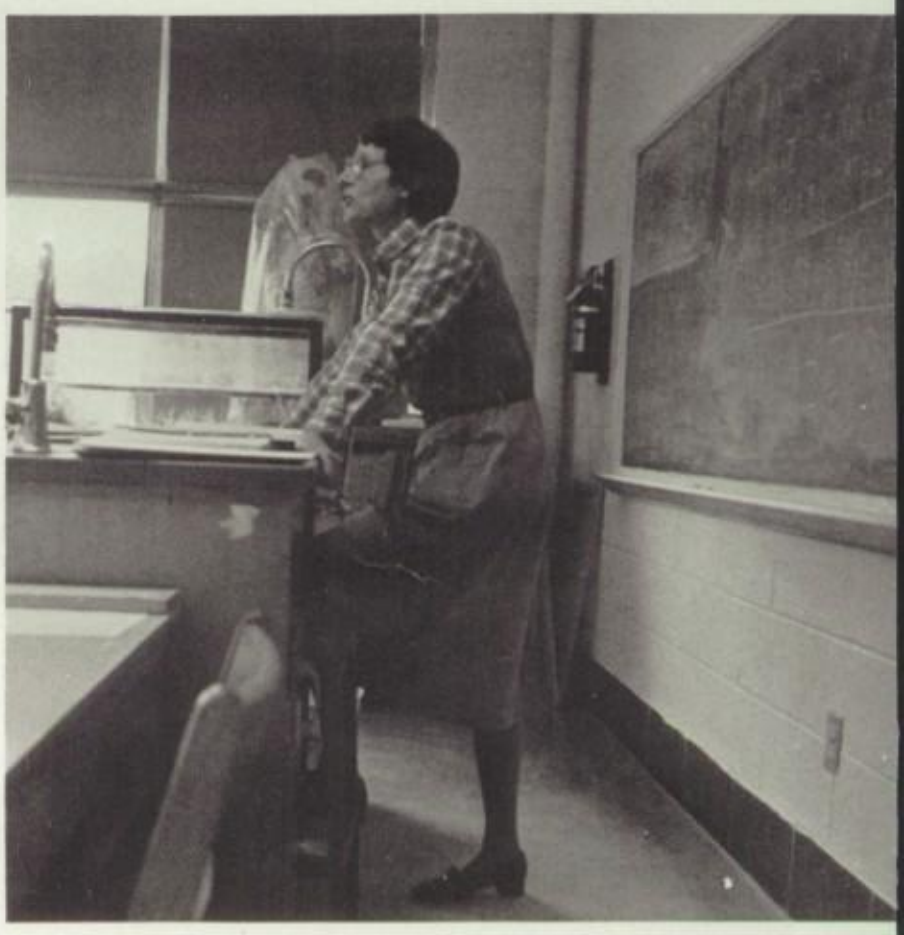






Mathematics: Rena Schlimer, Beverly Atwood, Grams Gutknecht, Renee Guthrie.





Building rockets which soared into the air or collapsed in despair, scampering after bugs or dissecting sharks, students observed the laws of nature at work. Experiment after experiment, science teachers guided their classes to a better understanding of life processes. While defining existing theories, students were encouraged to formulate their own hypotheses. Science teachers made clearer the complicated while creating curiosity of the unknown.

Science: Judy Smith, Loretta Hall, Janice Davis.

Science Offers Explanations

Science: Mary Lou Wheeler, Gloria Perkinson, Margaret Misch.

Would the rumor of split lunches become a reality? Thoughts of longer classes, lack of time for clubs and a shorter lunch of only twenty minutes troubled students. They were anxious that friends might not have the same shift and they sought explanations of the proposal. For every question, an answer seemed ready and waiting. The cafeteria was losing money and the program promised to combat the loss. Students worried and argued, but grudgingly came to realize they must accept the possibility and hope for the best.

Cafeteria: Rachel Richardson, Nancy Wilkerson, Jimmy Cheek, Velma Justice.

The Dreaded Rumor

Cafeteria: Helen Brown, Oren Farrington, Aggeline Clemmons, Allene Winston.

A Chance to . . .

We had all, at one time or another, contemplated taking on another's personality. Dreams of leaving behind reality to venture into a life of excitement had us wondering which musical we would do this year. Many musicians, singers and dancers practiced in preparation for cast auditions. Others of us put our talents to use in the production of sets and props. The important thing was to be a part of the effort, to work with the combined arts departments to accomplish a superior production. Throughout Jordan the arts were evident every day — in the echo of voices singing, instruments playing, or in the works of art displayed. With choral shows, band assemblies and bright bulletin boards, we recognized that Jordan had given us the chance to give of ourselves through our talents.

Away from school we were entertained in the movie theaters by The Empire Strikes Back and Ordinary People. We asked who shot J.R. on the TV show Dallas, while in reality a more unfortunate shooting resulted in the death of ex-Beatle John Lennon. While disco died, beach, rock and "new wave" played strong. Radio waves were not only filled with music, but with voices of Jordan students. Our radio program aired each Saturday morning on WTIK. We were reaching out — using our own gifts to communicate with others.

Battling fog, rain and mud the fearless marching Falcons perfected their drill routines. The seven weeks of the football season had never seemed so long as Marching Band members arose at dawn each day to practice, making their way through the early morning mist. Upon the close of the season, Jordan received an invitation to perform at the Durham Band Festival and was rewarded with a 95 of 100 points for superior music and formations. Perhaps their outstanding performance was due to those early morning practices . . . ?

Creating Movie Magic

They did it again! Each song seemed better than the previous one, as the choral department captured movie memories in "Going Hollywood" Mrs. McIver and Mr. Culbreth perfected the numerous solos and duets which highlighted group performances, while the characters of Miss Piggy and Ben added delight. Mr. Hicken's musical direction along with Anne Dwyer's choreography brought the audience to a standing ovation for the Continental/Shaft routine. Balloons, canes and top hats coordinated by Miss Teer lent authenticity to "You Ought to Be in Pictures" and "Somewhere Over the Rainbow". The fantasy of old Hollywood became a reality for Jordan.

Talon Creates an Annual Affair

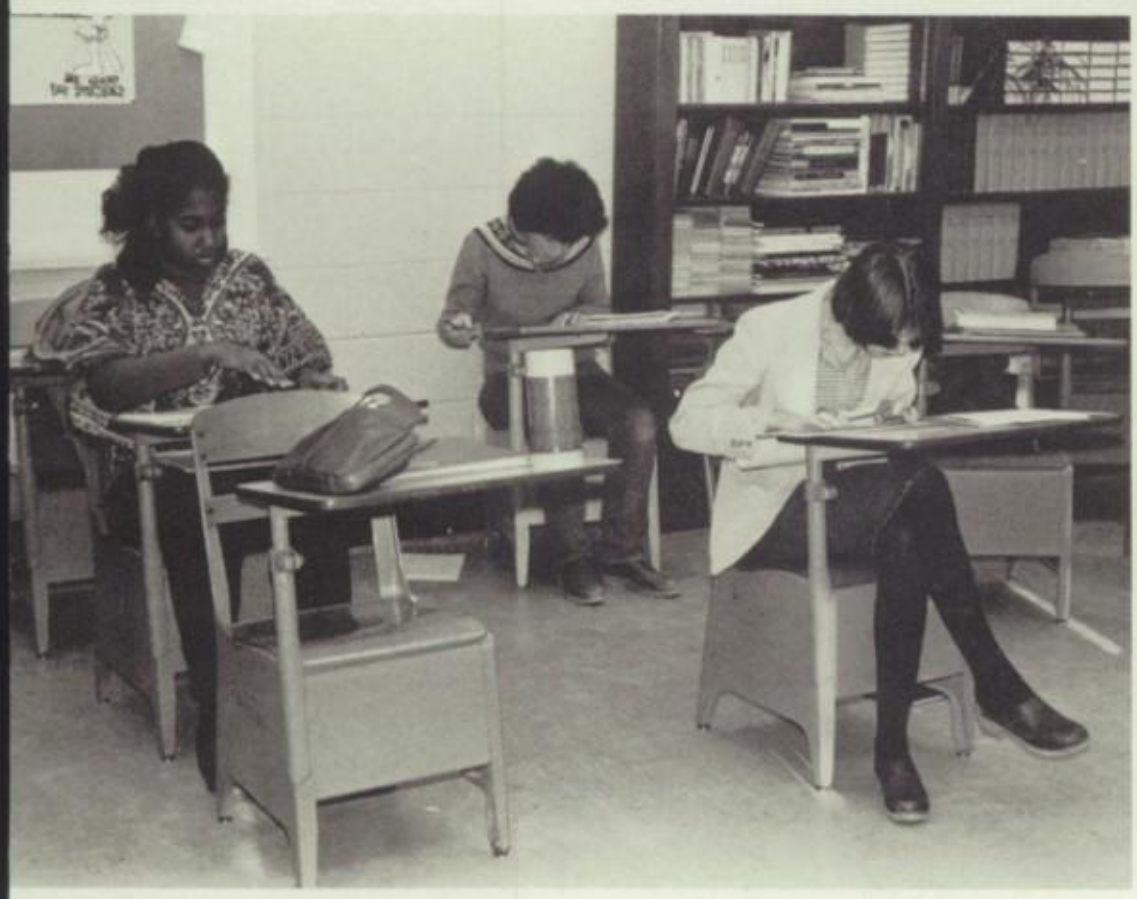
The discordant blast of "Catch that Talon Spirit" in the annual assembly kicked off yearbook activities. The Talon Staff, comprised of amateur singers and actors, enthusiastically performed a series of skits with the theme "Let's Have an Annual Affair". The affair continued with book sales and balloons, bumper stickers and buttons, as the staff spent a solid week wearing their infamous Annual Affair T-shirts.

TALON SENIOR STAFF — Row 1: B. Strand, B. Bunting, J. Clayton. Row 2: M. Hutchins, V. Creasman, K. Dutrow, N. Garg. Row 3: S. Bullock, B. Hume, T. Walter.

Carney, J. Clayton, S. Bullock, M. Lloyd, N. Garg. Row 5: B. Hume, T. Walter, L. Boswell, B. Strand.



They were uptight and exhausted. Final deadline was quickly approaching, while the yearbook staff spent every free minute redoing layouts and copy, checking names with pictures, proofing for consistency and overall effect. Starting with no money, no pictures, and few ideas, the staff had set its goals discretely. Raising thousands of dollars was no easy task, but spending it wisely was even harder. One desire prevailed: to capture in pictures and words the feelings of classmates and the atmosphere of Jordan. They wanted to produce a TALON which would hold meaning for the present, and memories for the future.

Each time the Falcon's Cry was published, reporters and editors felt they could not think of another interesting story; yet somehow each paper was informing and entertaining. Mrs. Lloyd advised the staff, which funded the paper in part through skate-a-thons, paper drives, and M&M sales. The Falcon's Cry also set a new precedent with their "Hat's Off" publication, the monthly sheet honoring outstanding students and faculty. The staff and their advisor kept Jordan up to date as each newspaper rolled off the presses filled with sports, gossip and current events.

A Chance to . . .

Athletic competition was not separated from world affairs, as the United States boycotted the 1980 Summer Olympics held in Russia. Elsewhere, however, the sports world went on basically unaffected, and Jordan was no exception. There was no stopping our Jordan athletes as tennis, football, cheerleading and cross country participants began training under the blazing summer sun. Their strenuous practice yielded rewards. The Girls' Tennis Team was as consistent as Bjorn Borg, who commanded respect with his historic victory over John McInroe in the nearly four hour Wimbledon final. Although not quite a match for the University of Georgia college champs, our Falcon Football Team was impressive in its defeat of top ranked Apex. Sports involvement grew, and our cross country Running Birds and Volleyball Team followed tradition with awesome seasonal records.

Ever-increasing awareness of local and national sports was highlighted by the rising popularity of soccer in the U.S. and abroad. Those soccer fans among us found Jordan's team just as remarkable, as the Nads demonstrated excellence throughout the season. Similarly thrilling was the United States upset of the Soviet Hockey Team in the Lake Placid Winter Olympics.

With the coming of cold weather came the excitement of indoor sports, and the added attraction of motivated and inspirational cheerleaders. While the Basketball Team won the State Title, the Swimming and Wrestling Teams ranked among the top powers. We followed their progress, taking pride in their efforts, and when our teams were not playing, we turned our attention to college games and the ever-present ACC rivals. Almost all of us were involved with sports — either as spectators or as participants. With chances to become involved, and the ability to excel, was it any wonder Jordan was awarded the Wachovia Cup for athletic excellence?

To Kim:

Its been nice knowing you this past year, even though we only met each other on friendly bases for the first time. Have lots of luck in the future.

Sometimes being the underdog is an advantage. Jordan's soccer team started the season with nothing to lose — they had no title to defend, no record to uphold. Entering each game eager and demanding, the team maintained mounting enthusiasm throughout the season. They won match after match, with first time victories over Vance and Cardinal Gibbons, as well as a tie with their arch rival Chapel Hill. The team members had good reason for their frequent emotional chants in the courtyard, as they clinched Jordan's best soccer record.

The girls had heard it before — when you're on top, everyone's out to get you. The volleyball team's tradition of excellence pressured them to remain on top in spite of their steadily improving opponents. Each of the conference teams had one overriding goal; to beat Jordan — the champs. Knowing they could not relax, the Falconettes drilled to perfect each aspect of their game. Skills were mastered and the girls won the Conference Tournament, proving themselves deserving of the title: Champs.

There was no doubt about it — the Jordan wrestlers were in good shape. They worked out and practiced nearly four hours a day. Endurance seemed limitless in these young men; success inevitable. Repeatedly they bettered their previous pinning times, setting records and gaining local recognition for outstanding talent.

Flashing proud grins, the girls returned to school after the State Meet. Never before had Girls' Cross Country been recognized as an official school sport. The girls finished second at the Sectional Meet and third in the State Meet, while the boys came in first during the regular season competition. Long distance runs increased endurance while intervals perfected speed. The girls' and boys' teams trained together and won together.

"We're number one!" shouted the girls as they struggled to maintain their position as Conference Champs during the last regular season match against Apex. Try as they did, however, they fell to defeat for the first time in two years. Distressed by the loss to Apex, yet far from despair, they were more determined than ever to win the Conference Tournament. Fighting blisters and broken hearts the girls decisively crushed their challengers. Wearing newly acquired team shirts, the Girls' Tennis Team carried away five singles and two doubles trophies and once again the Conference Tournament Title.

Falcons Take to the Water

They couldn't be overlooked. Their hair, conditioned by chlorine, had a special shine and the swimmers themselves had a certain vigor. Anyone who rose before dawn for practice had to have more than a common enthusiasm. The Jellyfish, known for their superior swimming talents and determination, fought to regain the Conference Title. Each practice lap they swam whet their appetites for victory. They built confidence into their considerable talent with a little motivating rowdiness.

Long before the pep band or crowd arrived, the girls were on the court. Scheduled in between Junior Varsity and Varsity games, they may have been the least publicized of the school basketball teams, but they were certainly not the least capable. With only one girl's team, the competition for positions had been tough. The rigors the girls had endured in order to qualify for the team had taught them a persistence which reinforced their proficiency. They were determined to profit from their efforts.

As the cheers grew louder and emotion intensified, the basketball players realized how much pride the students took in their teams. Each time they ran a new play, made a lay-up or a jump shot, the players felt they had met the crowd's expectations, but more importantly they had satisfied their own expectations. They were eager to win, but especially desired to fulfill their personal goals. Some Varsity players hoped to merit athletic scholarships or positions on college teams, while J.V. players worked in hopes of someday filling the shoes of the Varsity players. Both teams aimed at reaching personal goals, while gaining the respect of their school.

A Chance to . . .

It was second period, and once again the office aid entered our classrooms, bringing with him the daily morning announcements. We had grown accustomed to the familiar messages, and sat listening to our teachers report the activities and meetings of the day. The list went on and on. For every interest there was an organization, and we anticipated the fun the activities promised. We joined the clubs and did have a good time, but we soon understood that in their entirety the organizations offered and demanded much more than interest. They tested our dedication, our sincerity of intent. Many took on greater commitments, and in return we gained the skills and qualities which would be valuable as we ventured beyond school into the community.

Obligations to society would employ these skills of effectively working with others, handling money and making decisions. Would our choices turn out for the best? Community groups around us seemed plagued with troubles, and their decisions sometimes ended in misery. In Greensboro, the trial of the Klan-Nazis versus the Communist Worker's Party concluded with the release of the Klan defendants. Further unrest was evidenced in Poland's newly organized labor unions, and the activities of the P.L.O. Our trust in our leaders was shaken with the outcome of the ABSCAM trials, which paralleled the local scandal of the Jaycees' JAMSCAM.

We recognized the mistakes of these groups, and we were determined to achieve better results in our efforts at school. Clubs taught us the secrets of leadership: we learned when to follow, when to compromise and when to direct. The results of our activities showed us we could overcome our limitations. Often, our efforts met success. Always, we had grown. We had shared in an experience and had become a part of the experience.

A Chance to . . .

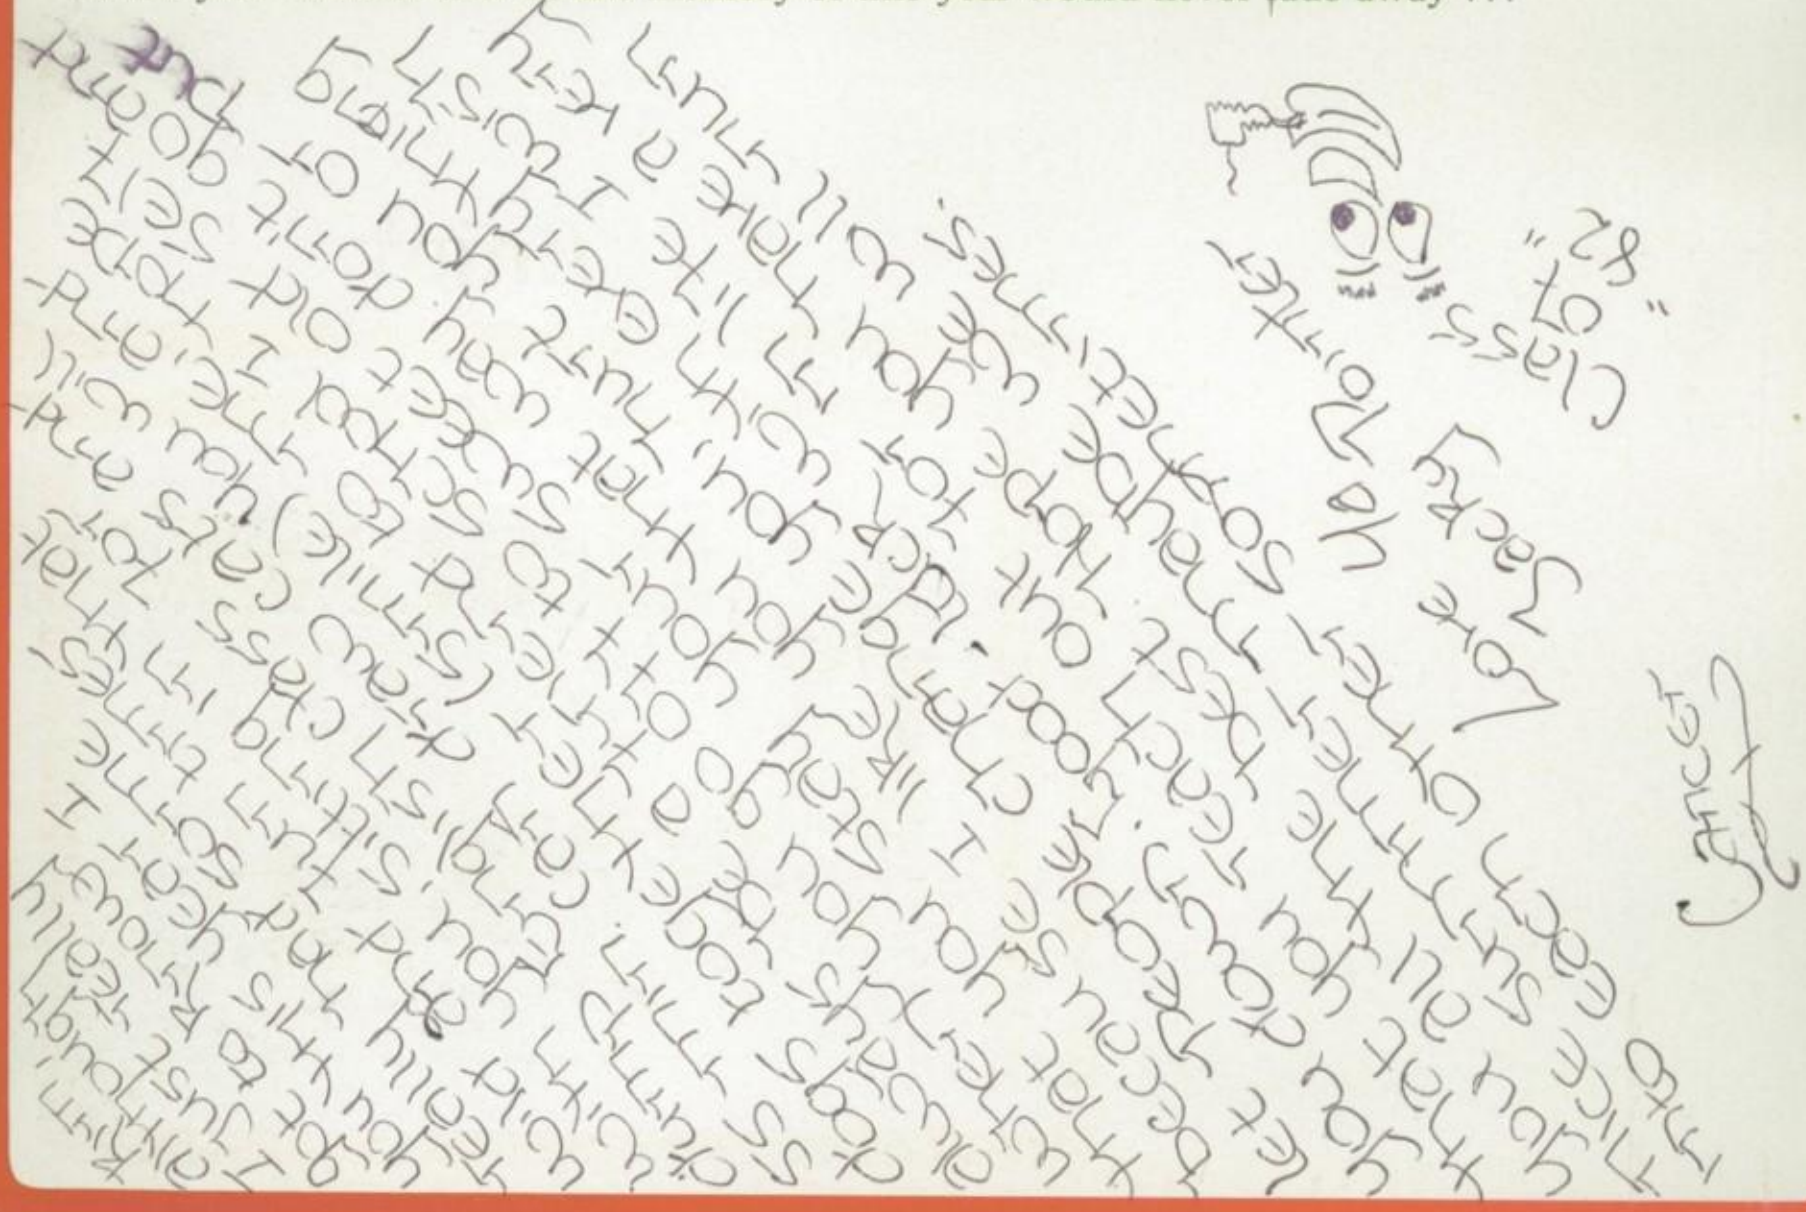
As we walked down the hall, we heard an upperclassman yell "Slopmore!". How did they make it sound so insulting? Somehow, they made us feel left out as they talked about AFS ice-skating, Myrtle Beach, and standardized tests. We wondered when, if ever, we would fit in. But as we began to share problems of parking shortages and demanding teachers, the gap seemed to narrow. We felt pride as we sang in chorus and became active in various clubs and sports. Finally the word "slopmore" became "sophomore" and we even stood a little taller as we walked down the hall . . .

They kept telling us the courses and grades of our junior year were most important for college acceptance. With a full course load including Chemistry and Algebra II good grades seemed almost impossible. And all those tests — PSAT, Competency, SAT — would they ever end? They promised the load would get worse, but right then we were juniors, the middle class. We didn't have the worries of sophomores adjusting to a new school, or of seniors applying to colleges. We were busy and involved, an integral part of parties, dances, football and basketball games. Yes, we were proving that our junior year was important — not just academically, but in all aspects . . .

We had finally made it: we were seniors. Yet we wondered if we were ready for what lay ahead. We longed to leave our high school days behind, looking forward to college life, but we wanted to linger just a little while longer. How could the three years have gone so fast? We could remember our first day as timid sophomores, never believing we would ever be seniors. But here we were, realizing we would never be in high school again. Looking back brought all the joys and trials we had shared with friends and made us realize how little time we had left. We wanted to make our senior year the best ever so the memory of this year would never fade away . . .



. . . Enjoy

Sophomores — A Part of It All

A Chance to . . .

Inflation hit the headlines at least twice a week. Businesses jumped at the chance for a sale, hoping to unload some of their inventory. Movie tickets rose to $3.50 and an average dinner at Darryl's cost $6.00 a person. Guys wondered how they could afford to take a girl out and girls wondered where they would find money to buy the wardrobes they wanted. Jewelry became only slightly more accessible as prices of gold and silver finally dropped.

Contemplating the future, we weren't sure how we would ever manage a family with the soaring mortgage rates and food prices. Would we be able to provide ourselves with the lifestyle for which we longed? Money was a universal concern, as we worried about our own budgets as well as the difficulties of others. Problems abounded: interest rates climbed to 21%, gas went well over a dollar per gallon, and the instability of the stock market exemplified our nation's faltering economy. Welfare had become a prevalent part of our system, and even businesses looked toward government support as Chrysler and other automobile manufacturers attempted to escape bankruptcy.

The situation did show promise, however, as various budget and tax proposals planned to ease the troubles. Somehow, we knew we would handle the problems. We learned to buy selectively, taking advantage of the sales at South Square, Northgate and University Mall. We found ways to have fun without expense. When short on funds we get together with friends, for a party or simply to talk or watch a movie on H.B.O. The difficulties were still present, yet when would there ever be a world without any troubles? We came to realize that step by step our economic problems would lessen, for each day provided new ideas and solutions. And somehow money seemed less significant as we learned to enjoy each other; as we grew closer.

Kim:
I am glad I got to know someone as wonderful! You really are crazy and fun person to be around!! I have enjoyed have you in my class! You have brighten them up a lot. Stay sweet and keep your crazy personality! Friends
Forever.
Candy W

Kim,
Throughout this year I have gotten to know you fairly well and I think you are a nice person. (when you want to be) You are a very crazy person but I guess you are intelligent enough to hang around me sometimes. Ha-Ha We have had some fun times in Office Occupations, with silly Mrs. Gillis. Have a fun summer. Much success in the future. Keep in touch so ~~the~~ we can get together and go to Central so we can meet some of the cute men there.

Kim,
I thought I'd Sign next to Sheri because we like each other so much!!! (Just Kidding) I love her to death!!! Thanks for all the poems and things you let me read of yours in 6th Period. I'll never forget the day in Mrs. Gillis' I read Scott's letter about Ted & Fred"! Embarrassing! You've made this year a lot of fun for me ... I really mean that. I'm glad we had the chance to become good friends. Next year I'll miss you so Promise you'll visit us next year. Stay WILD, CRAZY and CUTE!!
Take Care of Yourself always!
Your Friend,
Cindy

Not having life insurance is a luxury you can't afford.

Everyone's life creates different demands.

What's luxury to one person may be a necessity to someone else. But, besides food, shelter, and clothing, there are other things that most people need. And one of them is life insurance.

At North Carolina Mutual, we can give you a policy that protects the most precious things you've worked for in life.

It can provide cash for emergencies, and income for your family if you should die, or money for your retirement.

Call us today and get started.

It's nice to be able to buy a few luxuries once in a while. But don't overlook a necessity like life insurance.

Kim, We have been buddy's since 9th grade, which was a fun year we picked at Mrs. Leonard and called her "Leipard Lady" and drove her crazy. But that was part of life. We had fun in Githens and Jordan I suppose but it is all coming to a end now. I hope you have a great future. And go to college because you are to smart to sit on your ass and do nothing. Let us keep in touch and not just see each other on the street when we run into each other by mistake. Remember me alway. Sylvia, the craziest girl you know.

Love Ya,
Sylvia Hayes-Barr

TO: Kim

One of the kindest, nicest, and sweetest people that I know. (I'm kidding of course) Seriously though, I can't believe that you are finally leaving me behind, you've tried once and failed. I know of all the people I'd rather miss next year, you will be one. We've had a lot of good times at this old dried up hole together, but we'll have even better times after you get that car!! I wish you much more than happiness + success, but I also wish for you to have a future. I say again to you, you are the craziest person that I know and that I know to be a fact. Try not to get into too much trouble, even though I know that you will. Use your brain, and see how far you go. (No where) Aren't you glad that I didn't write much. Ha Ha

Our lives, like streams, ran forward over obstacles and surprises, confronting the difficulties and enjoying the good times. Constantly moving and changing, we found a chance to grow, a challenge to discover.

See ya at home Vikki

To Kim,

This is our last year as school bums. I can't believe we are graduating with the grades we have had. (smile) You are one crazy girl and maybe one day Butner will accept you. (☺) Now I know this is our last year at Charles E. Jordan High School but don't shed to many tears over not seeing me for awhile because I'll come around and visit. Hope you have a nice summer and I have enjoyed knowing you and having you as a friend

See ya,
